Most of us are dependent on a milk supply which is far from satisfactory!

The cows may be unhealthy—the supply may take too long to reach us, it may be poor in quality, the milk is subject to contamination by disease germs, it may be watered and by not too clean water at that.

And yet there's a remedy at hand.

In thousands of homes throughout Australia and the Pacific the milkman has been superseded by a tin bearing the famous Highlander Brand.

Highlander Condensed milk (full cream) is absolutely germ free—the milk is drawn from healthy cows subject to Government inspection on the rich pastures of Southland, New Zealand, while the processes of filtration and evaporation remove all dirt and destroy all disease germs. The milk is condensed within a few hours of leaving the cows.

Highlander quality is the highest in the world—full cream. Why not prove it for yourself? It costs but little to buy a can, and you'll find that it helps to solve the milk problem simply and economically.

"The Girl From Frisco"

A 20-reel production filled with fascinating atmosphere surrounding the life of the Western plainsman, comes to the Empire theater beginning today and evening in "The Girl From Frisco." Marian Sals, heroine in the thrilling exploits in "The Social Pirates," which closed a successful run at the Hotel street playhouse, is a favorite co-star in the great production. True Boardman, known to legions of moving picture patrons, has an important part. Conceived, arranged and produced by the greatest serial photoplay experts in the world, the new feature to be shown each week at the Empire makes its bid to popular favor. The play opens by depicting a period when cattle thieves roamed the Western ranges. There is sufficient rugged romance, pleasingly interspersed, to add unusual interest to the unfolding of an ingenious plot. "The Girl From Frisco" will be repeated at the Empire theater Friday afternoon and evening. The serial will be presented in conjunction with an attractive program of first class dramas and comedies.

LAVA LAKES FURNISHING SOME MARVELOUS SPECTACLES NOW

Those who have read the weekly report about the volcano, said L. W. de Vis-Norton, "will perhaps have gathered that something rather extraordinary is now going on. As a matter of fact, rather extraordinary doesn't express it at all, for Halemau manu is now putting on a perfectly marvelous performance. The lake, or rather, the lakes, for there are two distinct lakes at different levels now, have been rising very slowly from about 130 feet down, during the past three months, while the benches and some of the islands, including the great cinder cones, have been subsiding; this week, however a steady rise has set in and the lake is now only 70 feet below the rim of the pit. And not only that, but the islands and inner side of the benches have begun to rise at an extraordinary rate, and the top of the cinder cones, which was away down a week ago, is now only twenty feet below the rim, and rising to beat the band. At the same time, Old Faithful, which has been buried since last June under thousands of tons of debris, has chucked its way through to the top again and is giving tremendously spectacular displays. The upper lake rises strongly at intervals and pours down in tremendous cascades into the lower one, and it can be imagined that a sight like this at night is beyond all description.

Those who saw the lake during the great high level period in January last would hardly recognize it now.

Then it was a great sheet of molten lava, rather placid as a rule, and with some large islands in it. Now, it is only about 20 feet lower than in January, and is a mass of jagged crags and pinnacles, round which the molten lava rushes furiously, with roaring and hissing of gases. There are several great cones at the sides of the lakes, and these are hurling great jets of lava flames high in air at intervals. The glare and reflection from the lake at night, streaming upwards and vividly illuminating the under sides of these savage crags, produces a picture of an inferno which is a bit trying to the nerves, but which should be seen by everyone who can possibly get there. I had a note yesterday from the scene of action, which said, in part: "It is wonderful how rapidly everything is growing in the pit, and the lava flows are coming over in tremendous quantities. You ought to advise everyone to come right over, for it would pay to make the visit at this present time."

I strongly advise everyone who can spare the time to go over now. It is a great time for photographers too as the pit is remarkably free from fumes and they are having magnificent weather all the while now. Movie men can get right down to the level of the lake and there is enough light to make the trail practicable at night also, giving a glorious chance for some unique night pictures of fountains at very close range."

MAUI ROBBERY BY A FILIPINO

(Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence)
WAILUKU, Maui, May 16.—Police Officer Pedro Bautista returned on Tuesday morning's Claudine from Honolulu where he went last Friday night in search of Francisco Dias, the Filipino, suspected of the robbery of the Hamakua post office and railroad station. He brought his man, who has since made a clean breast of the matter.

As stated in the Maui News last week, suspicion fastened on Dias when it was learned that he had been spending money lavishly and that he had had an undue amount of small change with which to pay for his purchases. Owing to the fact that the wireless was not working there was no means of having him caught on the arrival of the boat on which he left Maui. Policeman Bautista picked his man up on Hotel street last Saturday night and had him locked up.

Dias, who served a sentence once before for larceny, told Sheriff Crowley that he had been on a bench outside the Hamakua station pretending to be asleep, but in reality satisfying himself that Station Agent H. W. Bulfinch put the pile of change in a drawer and not in the safe. After learning this, he hid in a cane field until night, when he broke into the office and cut open the drawer with his knife. Of the $80 odd, which he got away with, he had about $6 on his person when arrested. The rest of it had gone for sporty clothes and joy rides.

RAIN FAILS TO STOP DEMOCRATS

TONIGHT'S MEETING

Tonight's Democratic primary campaign meeting will be held at Kamamau park, Fort and School streets.

In spite of inclement weather which failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the orators, the Democratic aspirants for city and county offices held two well attended meetings last night, one at the Kalia pumping station and the other at Laimi road, Nuanuu.

Nearly all of the candidates were heard at both meetings and there was no lack of interest on the part of the audiences. L. L. ("Link") McCandless, one of the managers of the Bourbon campaign, spoke briefly at the pumping station meetings and urged all present to put Democrats into office at the general election.

A system of physical training for the members of the police department and the establishment of a municipal athletic club, was urged by Herbert M. Ayres, candidate for supervisor. Tonight's meeting will be held at Kamamau park, Fort and School streets. The final meeting of the primary campaign will be held at Ala park at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow evening.
